Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: .the top halves appear to be the same size as the bottom halves. We have seen above that, by bringing about the fatigue of certain sets of nerves, we can produce an image of an object in a different colour to that it originally represented. These colours are sometimes known as subjective colours, and we can produce them in various ways. For instance, sssssssss 8888888888 Fig. 63. if a disc of card is painted in alternate black and white sectors, and placed upon the rotating machine and rotated--or black painted upon a white ground--on rotating, the resulting disc will, after a short time, acquire a certain colour according to the speed of rotation; thus a slow rate gives rise to the production of a green hue, while an increase in the rate of revolution changes it to a rose colour. Eood describes a method of observing...
